St Michael's Mount, Marazion, Cornwall

This romantic Cornish landmark is made up of a granite crag on a tidal island in Mount's Bay, crowned by a medieval castle and chapel, and linked to Marazion by a paved causeway. The chapel was built in 1135, and the 14th century castle has sub-tropical gardens sloping down to the sea and the pretty harbour.

Near Muker, Yorkshire Dales

The River Swale cuts a course through the limestone hills of lovely Swaledale. Dispersed through the green valley are the distinctive stone barns, with an upper storey for storing hay and a lower one for housing cattle in winter. The stone village of Muker was a centre for lead mining until the 1800s.

Lower Brockhampton, Herefordshire

This eye-catching half-timbered manor house, with tall brick chimneys, situated in a peaceful, isolated wooded valley in the English-Welsh border country, was built between 1380 and 1400. In the grounds is a small detached, timber-framed gatehouse across a moat, a lily pond and a ruined 12th century chapel.

Conwy Harbour, Conwy

Colourful fishing boats line the attractive harbour below Conwy Castle. The castle was built by Edward I between 1283 and 1289 in a strategic position to guard the Conwy estuary, with eight huge towers, a drawbridge and portcullis. The enormous town walls, with 21 horseshoe-shaped towers, encircle the town.

Sligachan, Isle of Skye

A sparkling river tumbles down the long, remote valley of Glen Sligachan. It lies at the heart of the jagged Black Cuillin range, which challenges experienced mountaineers and rock climbers. Loch Sligachan cuts across Skye from the east, amidst breathtaking mountain scenery, small lochs and waterfalls.

Brighton Pavilion, East Sussex

The seaside palace of the Prince Regent (George IV) was transformed by John Nash between 1815 and 1823 into one of Britain's most dazzling and exotic buildings. The Royal Pavilion is a blend of Regency grandeur and Indian architecture with exotic domes and minarets, as well as opulent Chinese-inspired interiors.

Dunstanburgh Castle, Northumberland

This dramatic ruined 14th century castle, the largest in Northumberland, stands on the clifftop near Craster, along a beautiful, remote stretch of coastline. Built between 1313 and 1332 by Thomas, Earl of Lancaster, it was a Lancastrian stronghold during the Wars of the Roses, but was damaged beyond repair in 1464.

Blackpool, Lancashire

With its iconic tower, illuminations, piers and sandy beaches, Blackpool has been a firm favourite as a seaside resort for decades. Blackpool Tower was inspired by the Eiffel Tower and was Britain's tallest building when it opened in 1894. A glass skywalk gives a bird's-eye view of the coast and promenade.

Near Hayfield, Derbyshire

Snow-clad moorland with farmland pastures below, is seen from the summit of Lantern Pike (373m). Its name probably comes from its use as a beacon in the past. The hill is popular with hikers and is often considered a continuation of Kinder Scout, the vast moorland plateau whose highest point is 636m.
